Horse owner found guilty of animal cruelty

Seized. Derrick Hamm says he loved his horses — but he didn't have the resources to care for them.

A Philly man who said he would stake his life on his three horses lost custody of the animals after he was convicted of animal cruelty on Tuesday.

"I'm gonna die before I let them go," vowed Derrick Hamm, 49, of the three horses seized by the PSPCA from a lot he rented in Southwest Philly on April 1, before his hearing on Tuesday.

Hamm described himself as a recovering alcoholic who bought his first horse four years ago after going sober and said that caring for his horses has become therapeutic.

He said he let neighborhood kids take rides and wanted to share the horses with the public.

"Those horses mean the world to me," he said.

But just hours later, Hamm had to accept that Monster Man, a chestnut gelding, Truth, a pony, and Justice, a Cremello stallion, were gone.

Philly horses are a rare, unique sight on the city streets. Urban cowboys at the Fletcher Street Urban Riding Club are beloved by locals, and "This American Life" focused on Philly horses in 2008.

But Philly horse culture

is also shrouded in some secrecy, as urban horse riders are aware that they are legally required to maintain the horses at a high standard of health and hygiene, but face constraints of space and money.

At Hamm's summary trial on Tuesday, PSPCA officer Leonard Knox testified that he investigated the lot on the 5500 block of Grays Avenue where Hamm kept his animals in March after receiving a tip through the PSPCA's hotline.

"I could see the horses were out in the yard — in a manure and urine mix up to their hooves," Knox testified. Knox also said the lot was full of debris and the animals did not have access to a sufficient water supply. He said bark from nearby trees was partly chewed off, likely due to malnutrition for the horses.

Hamm countered that the animals were in mud, that they had a larger supply of water and that they looked healthy to him.

But Knox testified that he warned Hamm that the animals would be confiscated if their living conditions were not improved.

Two weeks later, finding no change to the horses' circumstances, Knox said, the PSPCA executed a warrant and took the horses. Hamm said he would seek legal advice on an appeal.

Fishtown church gets landmark nod

St. Laurentius is getting landmarked. / PHILADELPHIA CHURCH PROJECT

A Philadelphia Historical Commission committee voted yes to landmark status for St. Laurentius Church — a site that has been closed, deconsecrated, seen its relics removed and scheduled for demolition by the Archdiocese of Philadelphia in the last few years.

Now the application will go before the full Historical Commission for a vote on July 10.

"Today's recommendation was very positive for St. Laurentius," said Michael Blichasz, president of the Polish American Cultural Center.

Built in 1882, the church was closed in July 2013 and merged with Holy Name Parish, which sits just one block away. But supporters say St. Laurentius is irreplaceable and has historic value.

"That church was built by immigrants who came from Poland," Blichasz said. "They built it with their own nickels and dimes."

"It's not in danger of imminent collapse," he added. "The steeple is in wonderful shape. It will outlast all of us."

High markups found at six area hospitals

Gouged. A Johns Hopkins report on hospital prices found six local hospitals with 1,000 percent markups.

Six Philadelphia hospitals are included in a list of institutions with the highest markups in the industry, according to a new report on hospital price gouging from researchers at the Johns Hopkins University Bloomberg School of Public Health.

The researchers compared the rate paid by Medicare with hospitals' official price lists. They found that the top 50 hospitals charged more than 10 times what it cost to provide those services. Typical hospitals charged roughly three times the cost.

The Philly-area hospitals that made the list were Chestnut Hill Hospital, Crozer Chester Medical Center, Brandywine Hospital, Hahnemann University Hospital, Phoenixville Hospital and Pottstown Memorial Medical Center.

The authors cautioned that an extremely small percentage of patients ac-

So much for charity

For years, hospitals used inflated prices to calculate the amount of charity care they provided, which was important because those rates helped nonprofit hospitals maintain tax-exempt status.

- Since 2008, the IRS rules were changed so that hospitals must instead use the actual cost of providing services when calculating charity care. That historical rationale may have contributed high official prices, and because costs rarely go down, they continue to play a role in price schemes.

Quoted

"The reasons hospitals can do this is there's no legal limit."

Fuse Brown

tually pay the rates that are on the official price list — which is called a charge master in health care jargon.

Lost in much of the reporting on these outlandish charges is the answer to a simple question: So why do hospitals have price lists with such outlandish charges?

For answers, Metro turned to Erin Fuse Brown, a law professor at Georgia State University who specializes in health care law.

Fuse Brown said that hospitals increase their charges to bolster their negotiation power with insurers, who have to come to an agreement on a discount price. The higher the starting point of the negotiation, the more an insurer will likely end up paying, says Fuse Brown.

"The reasons hospitals can do this is there's no legal limit," Fuse Brown said.

The number of people paying full price is "probably vanishingly small," Fuse Brown said. "You're basically waiting for a foreign person who is truly wealthy."

Some companies do pay full price. Workman's compensation and car insurance companies typically don't have contracts with the hospital. People without insurance are also charged the full price.

'Cheer mom' pleads guilty to sex with teen on soccer team

Guilty. The mother reportedly met the teen at a football game for her daughter's school.

The suburban mom who was caught by police mid-tryst in her car with a 17-year-old soccer player pleaded guilty to sex crimes Tuesday.

Iris Gibney, 42, a Victoria's Secret saleswoman, pleaded guilty to corruption of a minor and dissemination of explicit materials to a minor — for sending sexts to her young paramour.

The move followed Gibney's not guilty plea to charges at a hearing in February that included trespass by auto.

Gibney was sentenced to five years probation, 100 hours of community service and must participate in counseling. She also cannot communicate with her victim.

According to NBC, Gibney told the Montgomery County court judge, "I made a horrible decision and have been in therapy since it happened."

Gibney was arrested in November when an Upper Pottsgrove police officer found her and a 17-year-old boy naked inside a car.

As the officer approached the vehicle because it was illegally parked inside Hollenbach Park in Pottstown, he saw Gibney performing a sex act, according to court records.

Gibney, who volunteered as a "cheer mom" for her daughter's cheerleading team at Pottsgrove High School, reportedly met the teen during a high school football game, according to the victim.

The victim confessed to police that he and Gibney were having a relationship.

Reports also indicate that the two communicated on Twitter and that Gibney sexted the teen nude pictures of herself.

In February, Gibney entered a "not guilty" plea to charges of "corrupting a minor, trespass by auto and distribution of explicit materials to a minor via sexts found on the boy's confiscated cellphone."

Revealed. City gives names of officers in Tate-Brown shooting

The city posted investigative files relating to the December death of Brandon Tate-Brown online Tuesday, revealing for the first time the names of the officers involved in the shooting.

The revealing of the names had been a central demand of protesters.

Tate-Brown was pulled over in Mayfair on Dec. 15 by 15th District officers Nicholas Carrelli and Heng Dang, both rookie officers.

According to the documents, after Dang spotted a gun inside the car, they ordered Tate-Brown out, and during a struggle, Carrelli fired, shooting Tate-Brown fatally in the head.

The documents were posted publicly. They were also requested by Tate-Brown's mother in a lawsuit filed against the city demanding that it comply with police reforms ordered by the U.S. Department of Justice in a recent report.

District Attorney Seth

Williams announced in March that he would not charge the officers, calling Tate-Brown's death "a tragedy, not a crime."

Ten activists protesting the verdict that same night at a community meeting between the public and law enforcement were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct. They are scheduled for a summary trial Wednesday.

Prison break

Residents may have spotted fugitives over the weekend

Two residents said they spotted the fugitives in their backyard at 12:30 a.m. on Saturday, ABC News reported. They were holding what appeared to be a guitar case, which other media reported was kept in one inmate's cell and may have been used to hide tools used in the escape.

"We're just lost. We don't know where we are. We're on the wrong street," the resident told ABC News the men responded when confronted.

That encounter occurred about five hours before guards realized the pair was gone.

Law enforcement officers who have tracked Matt in the past describe him as devious and calculating. The two inmates had managed to maintain good enough behavior to gain a place on the prison's "honor block," where looser restrictions allowed them to wear and keep clothing other than their prison uniforms.

The green prison uniforms were found in a pipe the men used to climb out of the manhole, according to several media reports.

Sweat was serving a life sentence after his conviction in the shooting death of a Broome County Sheriff's deputy on July 4, 2002.

Killer in prison break on third escape attempt

On the lam. New York State Police lead a manhunt from Canada to Mexico.

A daring weekend escape from a New York state maximum-security penitentiary, the facility's first prison break, marked at least the third time convicted murderer Richard Matt had moved to bust out from behind bars.

As authorities searched for the fourth day on Tuesday for Matt, 48, and his fellow convicted killer David Sweat, 34, details emerged showing that the older inmate had twice tried to escape prison, once successfully.

Police investigating his getaway from the Clinton Correctional Facility in Dannemora, N.Y., just 20 miles from the Canadian border, were questioning a woman who worked in the prison tailor shop where the men had menial jobs. She was identified in various media outlets, including ABC News, as Joyce Mitchell. According to her Facebook page, Mitchell is an industrial training supervisor at the prison.

She was hospitalized with "severe chest pains" on Saturday, the day the prison break was discovered, her son Tobey Mitchell told NBC News.

TV images and media

reports showed large numbers of officers converging on the town of Willisboro, N.Y., about 40 miles south of the prison, following a reported sighting of the pair.

Meanwhile, Matt's only son told the Buffalo News that his father had a history of prison escapes.

"He has escaped before," Nicholas Harris, 23, of Angola, N.Y., was quoted as saying.

Matt fled upstate New York's Erie County Correctional Facility in 1986. He scaled a wall and gate topped with razor wire that slashed his forearms and remained on the loose for five days before he was caught at a family apartment in Tonawanda, N.Y., near Buffalo, his son told the newspaper.

Protesters seek firing of Texas officer who threw girl to ground

Hundreds marched through the Dallas-area city of McKinney on Monday calling for the firing of a police officer seen in a video throwing a bikini-clad teenage girl to the ground and pointing his pistol at other youths at a pool party disturbance.

McKinney Police Corporal Eric Casebolt has been placed on administrative leave pending an investigation of how he responded to the disturbance on Friday in the city about 30 miles north of Dallas, an incident that has raised fresh questions about racial bias in U.S. policing.

Casebolt, who is white, is seen shouting obscenities at black youths in a multiracial crowd, shoving a black teenage girl, briefly pointing his gun at African-American youths and throwing the girl in her bathing suit, who is black, to the ground, burying his knees in her back.

"We are demanding that the officer be fired and be charged with assaulting the youth," said Dominique Alexander, the president of the Next Generation Action Network, which helped organize the rally.

About 800 people took part in the peaceful rally, carrying signs demanding an end to police brutality and calling for police accountability.

US job openings hit record high

U.S. job openings surged to a record high in April and small-business confidence perked up in May, suggesting the economy was regaining speed after stumbling at the start of the year.

The economy's stronger tone was reinforced by other data on Tuesday showing a solid rise in wholesale inventories in April, in part as oil prices stabilized.

"This is more confirmation that the economy is indeed emerging from that soft patch in the first quarter and can still pick up even faster in the next few months," said Chris Rupkey, chief financial economist at MUFG Union Bank in New York. REUTERS

Teen who ran away over SAT pressure returns home

A 16-year-old girl from a Los Angeles suburb who ran away over the weekend because she was overwhelmed with pressure when she went to take her college admission test has returned home.

Mira Hu called her family from a Los Angeles library on Monday night and asked to be picked up, said police in nearby San Marino, where the girl lives with her family.

It appeared Hu was acting on her own volition on Saturday when she ran away from a school where she had been dropped off to take her SAT test. REUTERS

Former speaker pleads not guilty

Charges. Hastert's attorneys entered the plea on his behalf in a brief arraignment hearing.

Former U.S. House of Representatives Speaker Dennis Hastert pleaded not guilty on Tuesday to federal charges of trying to hide large cash transactions and lying to the FBI about it.

Law enforcement officials have said Hastert was using the money to try to cover up sexual abuse of a male decades ago when the Republican congressman worked as a high school wrestling coach and teacher, according to media reports.

Judge Thomas Durkin set a $4,500 appearance bond for Hastert and ordered him to surrender his passport and remove firearms from his property as conditions of pre-trial release.

Hastert, 73, stood hunched over and spoke in barely a whisper when he told Durkin he understood the conditions.

He was wearing a suit and tie and stood between his two lawyers,

John Gallo and Thomas Green.

Hastert has not made any public statements about the charges or the allegations that the payments amounted to hush money since he was indicted on May 28. He was mobbed by media as he arrived at the courthouse.

Blade Runner. Pistorius to run free after only 10 months in prison

Oscar Pistorius spent seven months on trial last year for the shooting death of model girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp. In the end, he was convicted of culpable homicide and sentenced to five years. Today, we find out he is to run free after less than one.

WTF South Africa?!!

It turns out that under the sentencing laws applied in his case, he was only really expected to serve one-sixth of his sentence. The rest of the time he'll be on probation.

"Oscar will be released on parole by the end of August," a Pistorius family member told Reuters. The BBC says August 21 is his release date.

Pistorius is known as the Blade Runner. His lower limbs were amputated as a baby but he grew up nonetheless to be an amazing runner, taking home medals in the Paralympics and participating in the Olympics.

Oscar Pistorius / GETTY IMAGES

His trial for the shooting death of his girlfriend drew international coverage. The whole thing was an accident, he insisted in court and under oath.

His story? He thought an intruder was in the house when he fired several bullets through a bathroom door in the Pretoria house they shared, killing her.

Prosecution witnesses said he was a hothead with a short temper who was increasingly verbally abusive to Steenkamp, 29, who died on Valentine's Day in 2013.

It's hardly over for Pistorius, however.

Prosecutors have won a bid to appeal the culpable homicide conviction and will seek a murder conviction at a new hearing in November.

Pistorius would likely be sentenced to at least 15 years if he is convicted of murder. JOHN A. OSWALD

Teen tackles bigotry one essay at a time

Scholar. Sumaiya Mahee is on a mission to build understanding in order to combat negative Muslim stereotypes.

Mahee wrote an essay tackling prejudice. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

She was in third grade the first time a boy in her class called her a terrorist. People won't sit next to her on the bus when she wears her hijab. Without it, people sit in the open seat without a second thought.

Even living in a city as diverse and progressive as Cambridge, Sumaiya Mahee, 13, faced prejudice on a daily basis because of her faith and heritage.

But her self-awareness and cultural knowledge go far beyond her middle school years. She is the author of an essay, "You're Not Who You Say You Are: Beyond the Single Story," an assignment for her combined social studies and English classes at Kennedy-Longfellow School that went viral and was published in Public Radio International's Global Nation Education section.

"I face these stereotypes every day because I am a Muslim girl. It's what I experience," Mahee said. "Writing about this boosted my self-esteem because it gave me a way to tackle the stereotypes that I face. When I started talking about it, I realized I wasn't alone and that other kids go through the same thing."

However shortsighted it may be, people are reacting to a growing tension and suspicion toward Muslims on local, national and international levels. Here in the Boston area, residents have seen numerous terrorism-related trials and two brutal displays of jihad-fueled violence.

Between the violent saga of Tamerlan and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, Usama Rahim's fatal stand-off with authorities in Roslindale, Tarek Mehanna translating Al Qaeda propaganda, Rezwan Ferdaus' plan to fly explosives into the Pentagon and US Capitol building and Ahmad Abousarma joining ISIS, local Muslims are under a microscope even in places as forward-thinking as the Bay State.

"It's hard to take in because I am viewed as a terrorist by people," Mahee said. "It's hard to take in because I am not the kind of person who would hurt someone." She writes in her essay, "according to society and everything else going on in the world, I am not who I say I am," an external identity that has been forced upon a child because of extremists.

SATURDAY, JUNE 13TH FRED BEANS HISTORIC USED CAR SALE

Doylestown, PA - Fred Beans, CEO and founder of the Fred Beans Automotive Group located in Doylestown, PA, has announced a ONE DAY SALE on Saturday, June 13th at 9:00AM, where pre-owned vehicles will be sold for as low as $999. This sale is being held due to overwhelming public demand.

Cars will be clearly marked, so come early for the best selection. This is a ONE DAY ONLY sale designed to get the local community driving again.

Fred Beans' pre-owned inventory levels need to be reduced to make room for shipments of new models arriving daily. As a result, all 8 Fred Beans Doylestown locations are selling these overstocked pre-owned vehicles to the public at drastic discounts in an attempt to clear excess inventory.

In addition to this huge variety of pre-owned vehicles, the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships in Doylestown features new Ford, Lincoln, Mitsubishi, Dodge, Chrysler, Jeep, Hyundai, Nissan, Subaru, Chevrolet, Cadillac, Buick, and GMC vehicles.

Fred Beans believes reviving the economy starts at home, and changing things locally will lead to changing things nationally.

In addition to the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships' extra inventory, additional vehicles have been acquired for this sale at incredible prices from various banks, repossession companies, auto auctions, credit unions, lease companies, and rental companies.

The sale will make pre-owned vehicles available for as low as $999. prices not normally offered to the general public. According to Fred Beans, "We want to give our customers a reason to believe in the local economy again. Someone has to look out for their best interest."

Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM to inspect the entire inventory and find the car that's right for them. Every vehicle will be cleaned, detailed, and fully prepared for instant delivery. On the evening of June 12th, after the close of business, Mr. Beans and his team will mark the special sale price on each and every vehicle.

Because Fred Beans' customers are feeling the credit crunch right now, the Fred Beans Automotive Group has given the dealerships' financing managers the resources necessary to get most customers' credit approved on the spot.

The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships has $10 million in lending power, the result of over 50 years of strong relationships with the area's leading lenders. This means that customers with less-than-perfect credit history can have their credit approved and drive home a quality pre-owned car, truck, or SUV by lunchtime on Saturday.

Even if a customer's credit report shows a bankruptcy, divorce, tax lien, slow payment history, missed payment, or repossession, or if a customer is a first-time buyer, Fred Beans may get them approved.

This special ONE DAY ONLY sale will be held at all 8 Fred Beans Doylestown locations this Saturday, June 13th at 9:00AM.

Pre-owned vehicles will be sold for as low as $999.* Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM for the start of inspection. Incredible sale prices, starting as low as $999. will be posted no later than 8:00AM. All vehicles will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships is expecting a high volume of customers for this sale, so be sure to reserve your spot early.

Customers wishing to trade in a vehicle are asked to bring their title or payment book for immediate delivery. Fred Beans will even pay off your trade-in in full, no matter how much you still owe on it.*

Most of these surplus pre-owned vehicles will get sent directly to auto auctions for liquidation. So if anyone has been thinking about purchasing a good, clean, dependable pre-owned car, truck, van, or sport utility vehicle, don't miss this special ONE DAY ONLY sale.

Courtesy transportation is available from all local airports, train stations and bus depots.

For more information about this sale and directions to our locations, please visit us online at www.999sale.com or call 866-920-9612.

*At least four vehicles on Fred Beans' lots will be sold for as low as $999 on June 13th, 2015. All offers to qualified buyers. Cannot be combined with other offers.

Money advice for 30-somethings

Life planning.

We round up five tips from expert financial advisers.

Today's 30-somethings may be smarter about money than their parents were: They are not calmly expecting any large institution to take care of them, and they know they have to compete with the biggest cohort ever in a challenging job market, says Catherine Hawley, a financial adviser who has many 30-something clients. Old financial advice will not apply. Here are some fresh new money rules for the latest greatest generation.

Be strategic about your career

"Our greatest asset is our

Taking time each month to review your finances will help you have a better overall view of how much you're spending and what changes you need to make to reach your long-term financial goals. /ISTOCK ability to earn money," says Sheryl Garrett, a fee-only financial adviser. Think carefully about what you want your future work life to look like, and invest time and money into getting there. Keep up your schooling and your skills, and network via social media and professional organizations.

Open a Roth IRA

The Roth individual retirement account is one of the best tax-favored saving mechanisms around. Once you put money into a Roth, it can grow without the earnings ever being taxed if they are not withdrawn until you are 59. Over decades, that is an enormous benefit.

Order your debts

If you are still carrying credit card debt, pay it off as quickly as possible. Do not be in such a rush to pay off student loan debt, especially if it consists of federal loans with a relatively low interest rates. Pay your monthly minimums on those low-interest loans while you build up savings and pay off other debts first.

Get the 401(k) started

You still have a lot of time for compounding of income to work in your favor, but only if you start soon. Aim to put 10 percent of your salary into your retirement.

Invest money in a state-sponsored college savings plan

Some states also offer a tax credit for a portion of those contributions. But you give up a lot for that. You give up liquidity at a time when you might also need to buy life insurance, save up for a home down payment and pay for a car seat and diapers.

1 Iggy Azalea drops out of Pittsburgh Pride

Ta-ta, Pittsburgh. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Sorry, Pittsburgh Pride attendees, you won't be enjoying the musical stylings of one Iggy Azalea. Actually, if you're Pittsburgh City Council president Bruce Kraus or one of the groups that canceled their Pride appearances in protest of Azalea's inclusion, then you're probably not too broken up over the news. The Aussie rapper finally bowed to pressure that her performing at the event wouldn't be such a hot idea given past remarks she's made on Twitter that came off as homophobic. But don't worry, she's sitting this one out. And she's totally sorry, you guys.

"I am truly disappointed that I have to share this news, but I will no longer be performing at Pittsburgh Pride on June 13. This has been a difficult decision, as I truly support the event and LGBTIQA communities. However, I feel my participation at this point would only serve to further distract from the true purpose of the event," she — or more likely her publicist — wrote on Twitter. "I am a firm believer in equality. Unfortunately in the past as a young person, I used words I should not have. The last thing I want is for something so carelessly said to be interpreted as reflective of my character. I meant no harm and deeply regret ever uttering those words. As an adult I would never use them because I understand they play a detrimental role in the fight for issues that I do truly believe in. I am sorry to anyone I have offended or disappointed." Yeah, she totally didn't write that herself. Also, you know you can delete tweets, right?

2 Miley's so totally open-minded, has a 'fluid' sexuality

Hey guys, guess what! Miley Cyrus has more sex-related stuff she'd like to tell you about. The shy, reserved and demure pop star opens up to Paper magazine about sexual mores and her own "fluid" sexuality. "I am literally open to every single thing that is consenting and doesn't involve an animal and everyone is of age," says Miley, who posed naked with her pet pig for the magazine. "Everything that's legal, I'm down with. Yo, I'm down with any adult — anyone over the age of 18 who is down to love me." That's probably a lot of people, ma'am. You might want to narrow it down a bit more.

Mumford may soon have an actual son

Carey Mulligan and her "Mumford and Sons" husband, Marcus Mumford, are reportedly expecting their first child, and the jokes really just write themselves for this one. "They weren't planning on announcing, but she hasn't stopped working," a source tells Us Weekly of Mulligan, who is currently starring alongside Bill Nighy in "Skylight" on Broadway. "Everybody around her is being very supportive. The show ends soon, and they're going back to England after." But if this baby ends up being a girl, will Mumford have to change his band's name?

Paul Feig is ready for 'Spy 2'

Comedy. The 'Bridesmaids' director has another hit with Melissa McCarthy

Paul Feig has developed quite a track record working with Melissa McCarthy, who broke out in the director's 2011 "Bridesmaids." Their latest comedy, "Spy," triumphed at the box office opening weekend, and they've got a little something called "Ghostbusters" on the horizon. But Feig would love to find some time to make a "Spy" sequel, if that's all right.

When you're approaching a spy comedy, how do you figure out the right tone to not make it a complete spoof?

For me, it's all about tone. I enjoy watching parody, but I don't want to make parody and I don't want to make satire, and I don't want to make spoofs just because there's nothing to latch onto. I just really faced plotting this like a drama, like a spy movie that I would want to see — but with a story that wasn't so complicated that it wouldn't have room for the comedy interactions that I like. But it's important for me that it's violent and dangerous. If you don't feel that your lead character is in peril, it's hard to engage. I just want to make sure that even at its most extreme comedy moments, it makes sense, where you don't go, "Well, that's just dumb."

You have a great track record with Melissa McCarthy, but the lesson I keep learning is that Rose Byrne is going to steal any scene she's in.

Isn't she awesome? This is my favorite role that she's ever done. She's the best. She's such a chameleon, too. This role was originally written for a 19-year-old bratty rich girl. She tried that version, but it wasn't quite right, so we played with accents and this cold English accent came out. And that [scene] with her being mean to Melissa in a way where she didn't think she was being mean, that was really funny. There's kind of nothing she can't do.

Some of your most notable comic moments involve bodily functions. Do you have some traumatic memories that you'd like to talk about?

My most recurring nightmares have to do with filthy bathrooms, so I think I do have a weird thing about that. But it's funny, when we were doing "Freaks and Geeks" people thought I was so classy, but there's not one episode that doesn't have a fart joke in it. I think fart jokes and s--- jokes are some of the funniest things in the world, if you can figure out how to do them right. They're the most human jokes in the world.

How much do you think about franchises? For instance, there was talk of doing a "Bridesmaids 2," but that never went anywhere.

Yeah, Kristen [Wiig] never wanted to do it. But I have no problem with franchises. I kind of thought "The Heat" would've ended up being a franchise. It would've, but Sandy [Bullock] didn't want to do more, and I get that. She's a giant star. But it's what I loved about TV. You get to spend time with the characters and really develop them beyond the two hours that you get in a movie.

So I like the idea of franchises, and for this one, definitely. I already know what I want the sequel to be, and Melissa is interested in doing it. We'll see. Of course, my schedule is pretty busy, but I just love the genre and I want to do more of this.

I started writing about the ways that were wrong with how people had appropriated her, and then I started writing about my own feelings about misogyny and my frustration.

So how did you even start working on the Joan of Arc show?

My artistic partner said, "Hey, you remind me of Joan of Arc! Let's make a show about her." I have a sort of androgynous look, too. So that's something I was puzzling out, too — why do I look androgynous? Why do I try to look more like a man? Why do I bro down? It led to some soul-searching.

The show is described as "comedic," but it sounds like the process got pretty heavy.

Love where you live

Lights will guide you home

If you're having an outdoor party, who needs plastic tea light holders when you can use seashells? Ornberg uses large shells to hold candles and act as beachy lanterns. Really want to get into the theme? Place the shell lanterns in a dish covered in sand. Wedging the "lanterns" deep in the sand will keep them upright until the candles burn out.

These five nautical home décor projects will help you ditch the city for the sea.

Summer is (almost) here and the livin' is easy. People everywhere are in a sun-tanned, sandytoed state of mind, as seen in the ocean blue nails, wavy beach hair and home décor currently trending. What better way to feel like you're on the coast than to spruce up your living space with oceanic accents and navy-inspired furniture?

Swedish interior designer Anna Ornberg shares her beachside know-how in her new book, "The Nautical Home: Coastline-Inspired Ideas to Decorate with Seaside Spirit." Even the smallest apartments can invoke a maritime aesthetic with Ornberg's do-it-yourself projects and crafts. Here are five ideas from the book simple enough to transform any room into one that could be on Cape Cod — salty sea air not included.

Explore the seven seas

Don't throw out that old scratched-up dresser just yet. Ornberg likes to dress up vintage pieces in sea charts. In the book, she says to first clean the wooden item and then sand with sandpaper.

Next, paint the piece with primer. For parts not covered in charts, add two coats of interior paint. Then cut the appropriate-sized pieces of chart, apply wallpaper paste and stick firmly, and then smooth out any air pockets. Keep the surface protected with clear, nonyellowing, water-based varnish.

Beach waves

Don't spend another dime on expensive curtains from the department store. "You can make awesome curtains for mere pennies from cheap burlap," says Ornberg in the book. She takes a burlap weave, soaks it in a tub of water and leaves it in a pile to dry for that wrinkled effect. To complete the look, use Hawser rope as a tieback.

Out to sea

A rope-lined mirror can resemble a porthole on a pirate ship. To get this fun look, sand the mirror's frame with sandpaper and wipe it down with rubbing alcohol. Using Hawser rope, bind the edges of the rope with twine and use a glue gun to attach it to the mirror's frame. Nail in some brads to secure the rope. Attach hemp rope on either side to finish it off.

Showcase your shells

Keep all of your beach treasures in one place, specifically where everyone can see them. "Collect your treasures in large glass jars or under glass domes, and leave them around as eye candy," Ornberg writes.

Letters to the editor

Writer doesn't know anything

Re: 'Is your festival outfit racist?' (Metro.us) Never in the history of reading articles on fashion in New York City (born and raised in Queens, the most diverse area on the planet by consensus) HAVE I BEEN SO APPALLED. It makes me question the integrity of what you're pushing to the population of 18 million people going to work every day. First of all, how does a girl from Pittsburgh become a fashion expert with a full-page spread on FASHION and FESTIVAL? Last time I checked Pittsburgh wasn't London, Milan, Paris or New York. You can argue that she attended fashion school and majored in art history, but that would be an insult to my friends over at the Fashion Institute of Technology. Laneri says, "Cultural thievery can be harmful." Since when is it harmful for superstars and designers to wear a bindi or kimono on stage? If anything, they are representing a union and understanding of culture as opposed to the bias Laneri has projected in this article. African culture is being [appropriated] by Iggy Azalea and such — did she ask the African community if it was okay for her to wear a African kente cloth? And if she sought approval, where does it start? Lol! Where do you get off projecting underhanded supremacy? [Which is] what I'd call an article that seeks to underhandedly segregate as opposed to integrate. I'm absolutely disgusted by this read.

Eagles' running backs are not battling for reps

NFL. According to Ryan Mathews, the 'three-headed monster' is getting along just fine.

Just in case there aren't enough carries to go around between DeMarco Murray, Ryan Mathews and Darren Sproles in the Eagles backfield this season, there's always the passing game.

With a possible three-headed monster ready to bust loose behind the Eagles' athletic (though still somewhat undetermined) offensive line, imagine trying to cover a combination of the Birds' three tailbacks defensively. It's got coach

Chip Kelly licking his chops. It has Mark Sanchez and Philly's quarterbacks excited as well.

"They are perfect for this system," Sanchez said after practice at Tuesday's OTA. "These guys aren't foreign to catching the ball. Whether it's a check down or they're the primary guy, Chip and [offensive coordinator Pat] Shurmur have a ton of plays for all that."

So what's it like in a running backs room with last year's rushing champion, a special teams and speed maven and a one-time featured back battling back from injury? If you ask RBs coach Duce Staley, it's like heaven.

"We are getting to know each other better," Mathews said, "being able work with each other and make each other better, it's become more of a brotherhood in there. We hold each other accountable and coach Duce has done a great job making sure it's tight."

The concern, right now at least, is not the distribution of touches for the running backs. It's learning the high-paced scheme and becoming fluid in the Chip Kelly offense.

Mathews knows he has to compete for carries — but also knows he brings a lot to the table.

"My work ethic, my veteran 'savviness' — I have been in the league a few years," Mathews, who has run for over 1,000 yards twice in five seasons, said. "I have a little bit of leadership [to offer]. It will be nice for the young guys to see that."

Defensively speaking

Monday, Eagles linebacker Brandon Graham said the Birds' defense had the chance to be an "elite" unit in 2015. Does Malcolm Jenkins agree?

- "I think so," Jenkins said after OTAs Tuesday. "I think that's where we are working to, to be an elite defense. Elite doesn't always measure in yards. The things we need to do are take the ball away and win on third down, and we will keep points off the board if we can do those two things. The front we have will stop the run. We'll get teams to third down and then let our pass rushers loose."
- Jenkins on the roster this spring: "Old faces, new faces, it brings the best out of everybody. The depth chart is pretty fluid. Guys know they are being evaluated in the weight room, the classroom and on the field."

Eagles already clicking, communicating on 'D'

NFL Malcolm Jenkins says the Eagles' defense is blending — much earlier than he expected it to.

At Eagles OTAs, if you listen really closely — through the blasting rap, country and rock music (or in between songs on their playlist) — you'll hear incessant chatter.

You will hear players recognizing coverages, players coaching their teammates up and good communication on the field, on both offense and defense. It's what you expect to hear from a finely honed NFL team in mid-season form. Not what you'd expect in June during organized team activities.

"It's early," Eagles safety and defensive leader Malcolm Jenkins said Tuesday. "Usually the main thing that doesn't happen when you have new guys is you have guys who are quiet, and that's how you have blown coverages. But the fact that if you look at the first group through the third group, everybody's loud and everyone is talking — it shows that they are confident and they know what they're doing."

Getting everyone on the same page sounds easy,

Jenkins has been impressed with the Eagles' new acquisitions both on and off the field. / GETTY IMAGES but with 11 different guys, each with different styles of play and personality, it is key to get a defense talking and clicking together.

Jenkins, with pride, barks to the second- and third-string players from the sidelines, like he's an assistant coach, leading by example and with his guiding voice.

"It's the No. 1 thing on defense," he said. "Can we all get lined up and play the same call? Even if we are wrong, if we are all wrong together we are right."

It's something the coaches love to see, and it's something that is right in lock step with the mentality of the 90 men working out at the NovaCare Complex during this optional (but nearly fully attended) practice period.

"They have to kick them out of the building," Mark Sanchez, who took reps with the first-team offense Tuesday, said of many of his teammates. "If you're not allowed to touch a football, Jordan [Matthews] has golf balls and tennis balls and he's firing them at somebody and they gotta throw it back to him. [Zach] Ertz is the same. And they are doing things out of the building, whether it's yoga or Pilates, these guys work until they physically can't anymore."

It's an interesting dynamic. One would think constant competition and trying to fuse veterans and young guns on a professional roster would be a difficult task. But for one reason or another, Chip Kelly has created some rock-solid chemistry as he presses all the right buttons.

"Every day we show up we are competing at something," Jenkins said. "Whether it be in the weight room, film room or on the field, everything we do we are being evaluated and competing."

MLB draft

Phillies all in with shortstops

In December the Phillies moved on from their all-time hit leader, Jimmy Rollins, by dealing the shortstop to the Dodgers, creating a void at his position.

The Phillies seem to have done just that ... and then some.

With current shortstop Freddy Galvis playing solid ball in the majors and Rollins' heir-apparent J.P. Crawford tearing things up in the minors, the Phils shocked many by using two of their top three draft picks Monday and Tuesday on the position of strength.

Galvis was the obvious choice to slide into the vacancy at short to begin the season and the 25-year-old has been one of the most consistent hitters on the team, especially in the months of April and May. Galvis' future, however, could possibly be diminished with a move to his more familiar position of second base when Chase

Is Freddy Galvis in the Phillies' long-term plans? / GETTY IMAGES

Uttley retires, is traded or moved to first base.

Back in 2013, the front office knew that Rollins' best years were behind him and that a future long-term replacement was needed. With the 16th pick in that same year's draft, the Phillies selected shortstop Crawford out of Lakewood High School in California. Crawford busted onto the Minor League scene, moving his way up to Double-A at the young age of 20.

Crawford is emerging as the shortstop of the future with a defensive game and speed like Rollins and batting .333 through nine games so far with the Fightin' Phils.

Monday night's first round showed the Phillies front office pulling a baffling move to most fans of the rebuilding squad by selecting a shortstop at No. 10, high schooler Cornelius Randolph.

Luckily for the puzzled fan base, scouting director

Johnny Almarez said the 18-year-old out of Griffin High School in Georgia would most likely play in left field.

Randolph was drafted for his well-rounded skill set, especially for his offensive game during his senior season when he batted over .500 and had 20-plus steals and seven home runs.

These attributes can help to clear the minds of fans and players alike. The next two rounds, however, saw middle-infielders come off the board again for the Phillies with a second baseman out of Arizona, Scott Kingery, and another high school shortstop in Lucas Williams.

The plethora of young infielders shows a bit of a possible plan in place. Although they are still young and could possibly be moved to the outfield, many may wonder if they are future trade bait.

Just as Freddy Galvis wonders if he is in the front office's long-term plans.
